

Jennifer and Richard Caldwell

April 3rd, 2004

Photography by Dan Harris PhotoArt

After three years of dating, Rick proposed to me January 30, 2003 on an isolated stretch of beach in St. Augustine. The whirlwind adventure of planning our wedding soon began. I knew I wanted our wedding to reflect us, not just as two individual people, but also as a couple starting a new life together. Since we are not extravagant and many times not mainstream, we opted for a more simple approach. We threw away the myth that weddings equal five or more bridesmaids, roses, a unity candle, lace, and the chipmunk dance. My dress was a classic A-line halter with minimal detail; my bouquet was created with white and green cymbidium orchids; each of us had one attendant; and we banned the chipmunk dance! It was liberating to step outside the predetermined wedding boundaries.

Our florist (David Snyder of White Orchid) referred me to Dan Harris PhotoArt. Before calling, I spent several hours vigilantly examining his complete website, from his Q&A section to his online portfolio. I was convinced...I had to have Dan! Our first meeting with Dan was refreshing in the sense that he recognized this was our day. His belief that each wedding is unique and should reflect the couple's individual style left me with the confidence that he would capture our wedding in perfect clarity. He took the pain out of planning and implementing our engagement pictures and was very flexible by allowing us to exchange items in our wedding package.

On our wedding day, when I was feeling frazzled, Dan was calm and collected. He is an amazing person and such a talented artist. He blended in with our guests and captured every exquisite moment through every step, vow, smile exchanged, and conversation. I was thrilled to see all our pictures on the website after returning from our honeymoon. It was so heartwarming to relive what each picture portrayed. His artistic and customized services are absolutely priceless. I will always refer Dan Harris to anyone in need of a custom, easy going, yet professional photographer. The wedding day moments captured will forever be a lasting testament to the love and joy felt by all. Rick and I will always cherish these memories.