

Cindy Dobelstein and Brodie Waters

October 4th 2003

Photography by Dan Harris PhotoArt

It was after one of his college basketball games, watching him greet his young nieces and nephews with kisses and hugs, that I knew that I would spend the rest of my life with Brodie. We had only been friends up until that time, but it was that night that I looked at him in a different light. Five years later, on December 23, 2002, he asked for my hand in marriage and of course I said yes.

That was when the fun began as we had nine months of planning ahead of us. We had envisioned a church wedding with warm colors, fine details, a fun party with lots of dancing and being surrounded by those that we love. Amazing as it seems, that's what we got. What we realized is that it only happened the way we had dreamed because of the people we worked with.

When it came time to choose a photographer, Brodie and I relied on a recommendation from a family friend. She sang praises of Dan Harris, so we decided to meet with him. We had never seen his pictures but valued her judgment as she had interviewed almost everyone in town to pull off what we thought was the wedding of a lifetime. After our meeting, we knew that our friend was right, Dan was going to be the perfect photographer to make our dream photos a reality. Not only were we impressed with the way the pictures turned out, we were thrilled with the service that Dan provided. When we were stressed, he was unruffled, when we were uncertain, he was confident. His calm and collected demeanor throughout the wedding planning and the actual event put us at ease. He reminded us often that it is our day and he wanted us to have it our way.

What I love most when I look at the pictures of our wedding day, is that it reminds me of how perfect it was and how much fun we had. Dan was able to capture every special moment and every fine detail. Even more, we were able to view the pictures online shortly after we returned from our honeymoon. Our family and friends were able to view them online too and loved that there are so many candid shots of them. Everyone commented that they had no idea he was taking so many pictures because you hardly knew he was there.

Our wedding day was the most exciting day of our lives, and thanks to Dan, it will be a day we can always remember!
