

Megan Copeland & Eric Smith

April 30, 2005

Photography by Dan Harris

On an unusually warm fall day in Dublin, my best friend Eric asked me to marry him. For three years we were inseparable as ijust friends, then one day we recognized the true love that was always there.

We chose St. Augustine as our wedding site for its classic beauty and as a midpoint between our families. Planning an out of town wedding certainly was not going to be an easy task, especially finding the right photographer. Aside from being talented, we wanted someone who could capture how close Eric and I are as well as someone who could manage our two very large families. After all, our pictures were going to be our memories that last a lifetime.

Dan Harris exemplifies all those characteristics that we wanted and more. We found Dan by researching on the web. When you visit his website, you actually feel the warmth of his personality as he narrates his photography style. Then you see his great pictures! Eric and I scheduled a consultation right away.

We met Dan at his studio for what we thought would be a brief introduction. To our delight, Dan spent several hours with us explaining our choices, not missing any detail of the wedding. He presented options and ideas that we had never considered.

The work he showed in his home/studio was incredible. We knew he was the one for us. It was comforting that Dan was always available in the weeks leading up to the wedding and after.

On our wedding day, Dan and his assistant were amazing! He even gave our videographer help with getting the perfect shots. There are so many wonderful pictures. I want every single one of them!

We were married in the gardens of the Oldest House. The setting was wonderful but a bit windy that day. This was no challenge for Dan. I love that he captured the innocent moments such as my veil blowing in the breeze. Years down the road when we look at those seemingly minor details, it will bring back vivid memories of our special day.

We would highly recommend Dan Harris PhotoArt for your special event.